

Web technology refers to the means by which computers communicate with each other using markup languages and multimedia packages.